

THE MEL GREENE INSTITUTE AT SAINT LEO UNIVERSITY PRESENTS

An Evaluation of a Family Reunification Program for Youth Exploited in Human Trafficking

Dr. Colby Valentine is an Assistant Professor of Instruction in the Department of Criminology at the University of South Florida. Her research focuses on correctional-based research, victimization, and criminology and criminal justice pedagogy. Since 2018, she has been a research evaluator for a multidisciplinary, human trafficking task force to help create and implement victim-centered, collaborative, and sustainable approaches to identifying victims of human trafficking.

Klejdis Bilali is a Criminology doctoral student and a research assistant for the Trafficking in Persons (TiP) Lab at the University of South Florida. Her primary clinical and research interests include exploring the trauma bond created between victims and traffickers, better understanding behavioral and mental health outcomes of trafficking involvement and examining victimization prevention.
